MAIN ACTIVE AGENTS

GLYCOLIC ACID: Glycolic Acid (hydroxyacetic acid) is the first member of the series of alpha-hydroxy carboxylic acids, which means it is one of the smallest organic molecules with both acid and alcohol functionality. It occurs naturally as a trace component in sugarcane -which is the source of our glycolic acid-, beets, grapes and some other kind of fruits. It has an excellent capability to penetrate skin. Once applied, glycolic acid reacts with the upper layer of the epidermis, weakening the binding properties of the lipids that hold the dead skin cells together. This allows the outer skin, namely the horny coat, to "dissolve" revealing the underlying skin. If absorbed in a deeper layer it can stimulate collagen and elastin production.
